

The university views access to its physical premises as a privilege not a right. Physical access for the user and associated administrative control types are based on a facility’s risk assessment, individual department needs, and the recognition that a user’s access can be fluid. Unit leadership and managers evaluate what access is necessary for each position in their unit to carry out their required duties in consultation with authorized access control contacts, and that access may be provisioned by delegated administrative areas either automatically or upon request without further review or approval.

Any access that deviates from the established access approved for a position/role must go through an exception approval process initiated by the manager before access is granted. Some users will require access to a single room (such as a student’s access to an assigned room in University Housing or an employee’s access to their assigned office in a university building), while the role of others will necessitate additional types of access.

The type of access allowed for users is at the discretion of the college or business unit as defined in the Physical Access Management and Control policy and may include the following types of control and associated details. For more information and details on how to request access, contact the delegated administrative area responsible for access management.
